

*The Post-Conflict Reconstruction (PCR) Project
invites you to attend:*

The Role of Youth in Conflict: Alternative Suggestions

Introduction by

Frederick Barton
Co-Director, PCR Project

Discussant,

Steve Seigel
Associate, DAI
Lead Researcher, Youth in Conflict Project

Wednesday, August 23, 2006
4:00 p.m.–5:00 p.m.

1800 K Street, NW
4th Floor Conference Room
Washington, DC 20006

Post-conflict environments are home to large populations of youth; some who perpetuate violence, some who contribute to rebuilding, and others who opt out. This youth group represents an enormous untapped potential to help in the reconstruction process, particularly with regards to improving security. The PCR Project has reviewed programs that have engaged youth in community safety practices; and analyzed resources on youth and community safety in post-conflict environments; interviewed program officers, social workers, and researchers to create alternative recommendations for engaging youth. Mr. Steve Seigel, lead researcher on this project, will present the PCR Project's findings.

Please RSVP by August 22, 2006
(acceptances only)
to: pcrbrief@csis.org